Ask HN: What is the simplest way to estimate CSS/HTML for blog? - ytch We're planning to start running a self-hosted Wordpress.com blog, but the site is going to be mostly static (no CMS, just static html/css etc.) Do you have any good suggestions for what such a system would need? A custom built Wordpress does not seem to be an option since we will not be heavily involved in running it. ====== ytch I guess what I'm asking is how complex would it be to have a simple page like If this is too simple, what are the minimums? I don't know the market for a self-hosted blog but it's something that I am really thinking about. ~~~ chetanahuja > If this is too simple, what are the minimums? I think the minimum you would want is some basic templating engine like renderize [~~~ ytch Yes, I've seen it. I would prefer a custom built solution since it will be less work to maintain. Q: FOSUserBundle: How to change registration form post data I am using FOSUserBundle in my symfony project. In my project there are many users registered but I want to change the post data of the registration form depending on the roles of each user. But I am unable to find a way to do it. I am storing data in users table and roles table. User table has columns like user_id, email, password, roles_id Can anyone please let me know how can I do this? Thanks A: You can create a yml file under config/packages/security/firewall_groups.yml to store your configurations for your firewall group. In this file you will write something like : default: firewall_name: main roles_matching: full: path: / roles: ROLE_USER, ROLE_AD
