Summer Challenge: Have someone you're working with complete your action list. You can have people around the world do this with you. For a lot of people, this may be the hardest step. If it's you, it's okay. I promise it's not. You can get started by getting an action list together for one thing or if you'd rather, you can take a look at what I've created: As you continue to do more and more, you will continue to see results and gains. But, you know what I say, it's not so easy. Hard work and consistency do pay off. It may not be in the first week or even month, but you will get results. Just believe and keep going. In addition to that, I'm also going to share how to make it easy, to keep going. I mean, it's easy to knock off the exercise and diet part of it all, but then what? That's the tricky part. People, it's time to let go of the excuses. Get rid of the giant tangle of them that's running through your head and get going. Think you just can't do it? I'm here to tell you, you can. I've written this guide for you in the hopes you can finally accomplish something in this area. So, without further ado, let's get going on your action list:

A: I'm not really sure whether this counts as a "hack", but a friend of mine is able to watch movies in a embedded web browser. This seems like a better solution than Flash, because it's much more light weight. Also, if you're on a Mac or Linux/Ubuntu box, it probably uses html5 not Flash. #include "../main.h" #include #include #include #include #include static int open_out(const char *path, int oflag, mode_t mode, int rwflag, int *fd, off_t size) { if (path == NULL) return -1; if (oflag & O_TRUNC) if (write(1, "/bin/dd if=", 12)!= 12) goto out; if (oflag & O_
