What's new:

A turn-based RPG with a country and military feel, this title has you taking on various jobs at various locations, and taking on various enemies in various places. An efficient tactical combat system lets you plan your attacks to overcome the most powerful enemy, and a unique easy-to-use interface lets you choose what "job" to do next.

This is basically a desert fantasy like Zelda, I mean if you forget about the cool combat system then it's a normal fantasy rpg in a desert planet. You can make loads of choices so you can be the kind of person that you want to be in the game although you will always have certain limitations.

This is a roguelike game. Your behavior affects your success in the quest and your skill as a fighter who is geared towards killing, so you better behave. You start with a sword and armor and from there you can choose different things to increase your fighting skills and become the best fighter out there (or at least as good as you can be in the game). It has the game mechanic from Stardew Valley so you pick a farm in a high-mountain environment and you can have multiple plots, animals and trees. It has fighting in mid-battle and you can upgrade your character by gaining points and buying items with them. Multiple users (up to 4).

Trainees in the English NHS prefer to work in medicine. To look at what influences patients who apply to train to work in the English NHS. A postal survey was conducted with adult patients (aged  $\geq 16$  years) in England at a time when assessments were taking place in the national training scheme. 837 patients were surveyed; 210 (25%) patients received a training place. Half of the 151 applicants who were active NHS staff and a quarter of those who had trained elsewhere prior to applying within the NHS actually applied for a training placement. Patients' views significantly predicted whether they would apply for training within the NHS or elsewhere for future posts. Thirty-eight percent were employed on the National Health Service by the time of the survey and the majority (49%) wanted to train on the NHS. Patients who had a better knowledge of the NHS and were satisfied with their current employment may have been willing to move from their current job to becoming a trainee. Initiatives to increase patients' knowledge about healthcare, improve patient service and reduce unemployment could therefore benefit both the NHS and patients.A

94-15 & 90-97 (N.D.III.1994) (stating that courts have held that an employee can not be liable for harassment where he or she does not participate in or solicit the harassment). [13] The plaintiff's claim of retaliatory discharge under T.C.A. § 50-1-304(b) for her conduct regarding the New Carthage annexation is without merit. First, the claims set out in the amended complaint are based on conduct which occurred prior to the enactment of Tennessee's workers' compensation law. A claim under the retaliatory discharge provision of the workers' compensation law requires that the plaintiff's refusal to violate the law or her discharge for such refusal has been held by the courts not to be wrongful discharge. See, e.g., Bryant v. Genco, Inc., 770 S.W.2d 650, 653 (Tenn.1989) (A workers' compensation claim will not lie against an employer when the employee is discharged because he or she refuses to commit the offense of knowingly violating a safety order or rule of the employer.). [14] In her response to the defendant's motion to dismiss, the plaintiff contended that the defendant failed to comply with the policy set out in T.C.A. § 50-1-304(a)(4) by failing to maintain, service or furnish a safe place of employment and by willfully failing to correct or remove a dangerous or hazardous condition which is likely to cause injury to her. (Plaintiff's Response to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss at 3.) [15] Section 324A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts provides: One who undertakes, gratuitously or for consideration, to render services to another which he should recognize as necessary for the protection of a third person or his things, is subject to liability to the third person for physical harm resulting from his failure to exercise reasonable care to protect his undertaking, if (a) his failure to exercise reasonable care increases the risk of such harm, or (b) he has undertaken to perform a duty owed by the other to the third person, or (c) the harm is suffered because of reliance of the other or the third person upon the undertaking. [16] The plaintiff's claim that the defendant negligently hired, trained or supervised its police officer employees is without merit. There is no evidence that the defendant did anything more than follow its policy regarding arrest of

I know that this is long but I think that the better I serve these guys, the more valuable to you that I will be, so keep that in mind...call me if you have any questions!!!Q: How to print double array without commas? I'm trying to print a double array without commas between each element but I keep getting an integer instead of a double as a result. I've been trying a few methods to get a cleaner array but so far no luck. `public static void main(String[] args) { int s1[] = {1,2,3,4}; double d[] = {1.5, 2.5, 3.5, 4.5}; double mass[] = {1,2,3,4}; ArrayList M = new ArrayList(mass.length); Arrays.stream(mass).forEach(M::add); Arrays.stream(s1).forEach(M::add); Arrays.stream(d).forEach(M::add); for (Double elt : M) { System.out.println(elt); } System.out.print(Arrays.stream(s1).mapToDouble(d::multiply).sum()/s1.length); int[] s2 = Arrays.stream(s1).mapTo`
