Sailboat racing in VR is an awesome experience. Imagine feeling the warm breeze in your hair, feeling the ocean spray from the boat in front of you, the moment when you pull away with the boat behind you, the flutter of your sails as they catch the wind. All that from the comfort of your own home, and much more. Live the adrenaline rush of this awesome game! - - - - -

MarineVerse Cup is a VR sailing game, that also has nice art, music and graphics. It has not (yet) the classic boat controls (like steering) but the fun of this game is very similar! In real sailing you have a steering wheel, a tiller (a wheel with a special grip), in VR you only use your head. You navigate by tilting your head (around and around), you bring your hand up if you need to do some balancing at the helm of the boat and steer. Like in real sailing you can also choose which sails you want to use, they come in several variants and you can switch between them. You have not only the steady Balance Sails that are needed when racing, but also more powerful Sails of which you use when you are coming closer to something, either a buoy or even the other boats in the race! Sails are adjusted to your height, if it's too high, you get frustrated. In real sailing it's exactly the same. Also your boat is equipped with sails and is powered by a propeller. Those props must be operated by a controller. In VR you get to drive the boat by tilting your head around in your choice of racing position, with a paddle. This is the steering wheel of the boat, you can also have a tiller in real sailing (if you need it, I won't touch on how to drive on my paddle). If you want to go for a long sailing distance it might be better to drive with the tiller. With a paddle your boat is not propelled as easily as with a tiller. The boat is also driven by a real wind coming from the side. You can also choose between a single and a multiboat racing, in which a second

"Quickly proved that my new PSU breaks the capacitor in the bridge rectifier on X and Y axis. I hoped all the new controller was working not so! So update version on 45K for now!!" - MissingTreasure "I really enjoy the second part of this game. I just wish there was more of the sneakiness there." - DrTekk"I am having a blast right now with the two versions of this game. For the core game I can't find anything to dislike and it has been replaying in my head several times after I was done with it. There was one thing I was missing at the end the fact that you can stand up and don't have to rely on the controller so I would like an option of something for that also. This game is fun. Go for it." - Azarioos"This is a good little point and click adventure game. It has a lot of flaws but I enjoy good science fiction stories. I think this game is exactly what people want from point and click games. Good job!" - tj9er - Jay"

Fury of Dracula Digital Edition Soundtrack is a 2-CD and a DVD release by New Line Cinema, directed by Tim Burton and starring Vin Diesel, Geena Davis, Kevin McCarthy, André 3000, Alec Baldwin, Bruce Willis, Michelle Pfeiffer, William Finley and Tom Waits. It released on June 5, 2013. Background On May 15, 2012, it was announced that Burton and his longtime creative partner, Karen Allen, were working with Warner Bros. to produce an adaptation of Bram Stoker's 1913 novel Dracula for release in 2013 by New Line Cinema. The news was again confirmed on May 17, 2012, when Columbia Pictures acquired the theatrical rights to Warner Bros.' novel, with New Line Cinema to produce. The studio used to own the rights themselves, but sold them to Time

Warner in 1996. Burton came to calling Wu and Wadler as well as Tim Story (who has previously worked with Burton on the films Big Fish, Ed Wood, and Alice in Wonderland) and Bob Ducsay to compose the score. While the film takes place in 1895 England, it maintains a heavy influence from the music of that era. The film premiered at the 3D cinemas of Empire Leicester Square on June 28, 2012. Two days before the official premiere, plans were announced to release the film on Blu-ray 3D, Blu-ray and DVD, with a 2D and 3D theatrical re-release later in the year. In an interview at Comic-Con 2012, the cast described the film as "dark", stating: Plot The film centers around Józef von Lányi, a reclusive artist and collector of paintings and artifacts, who believes his childhood was lost after he was adopted by a Polish aristocrat. In an attempt to reconnect with his past, he travels to Transylvania to research his roots, to which he discovers a museum is accepting donations to preserve an ancient evil. There, he meets a mysterious woman named Richelieu (Geena Davis), who reveals herself to be the fearsome vampire Countess of Dracula. She begs Józef to let her stay and learn to live for another three hundred years. Consumed by the sadistic vampire, Józef reluctantly allows Richelieu to live at his castle and later takes her to London. But when Józef's fiancée Helen (Michelle Pfeiffer) learns of Richelieu's true nature,

Q: Efficient way to read struct from binary file I need to read a file containing a struct into a buffer, and count the structs' fields. The file has at most 256 fields of a fixed size. One way to do this is to read the file's content into a buffer, and then pass the buffer's data to an algorithm, performing a for loop over the buffer's fields to count the number of fields. But I don't want to read the entire file into memory, because there is a limit on the number of structs in the file. And if there are more structs than 256, that's not going to work. I also need to read from different files, but the same number of fields in each struct. Is there a more efficient way to do this? EDIT I'm trying to use the FindFirstChangeNotification but it requires the system to suspend the thread while it reads the file. This is a huge overhead if the structs in the file have many fields and there is a lot of change. A: No: there is no more efficient way. If there are only a few structs in the file, I would suggest keeping some amount of data in memory. 256 is pretty darn small for the amount of data you need to process.
