Those are just a few examples of the ways in which advertise Spinal Decompression as the Cure for Back Pain. Advertise Spinal Decompression as the Cure for Back Pain. Advertise. The list goes on. Crawford says that advertising is even more nefarious than we might think, because our recognition of it, and therefore our awareness of it, can be manipulated. For example, the Metternich Guide for Advertisers (Metternich, 1955, 1979), advertises in a sophisticated and subtle way about its own significance by mentioning its background in imperialistic advertising during World War 2. Crawford claims that this kind of advertising is really a way of getting people to associate an agent with what it is selling. Thats because Metternich is not a real company, it was created to resemble one. Its objective is to get people to make the connection between Metternich and advertising.
