A new study on ocean temperatures published by Climate Central has found that the southeastern US is warming the fastest. The findings published in Nature Climate Change show that waters around the US Gulf coast are warming at a rate of nearly 1 degree Celsius (1.8 degrees Fahrenheit) per century faster than other areas of the country. ADVERTISEMENT "The southeastern US has warmed at a rate of 0.52 degree Celsius (0.9 degree Fahrenheit) per decade over the past decade," the study found. "This rate is nearly four times that of the rest of the nation and is the largest temperature increase in the Atlantic." The study, which combined data from oceanographers, statisticians and climate models, also shows that the southeastern US is sensitive to temperatures from the Arctic. "The Gulf of Mexico is the main pathway for the transport of cold and salt-rich ocean waters into the lower atmosphere, which is causing sea surface temperatures to warm up," study co-author Mote Hee, a climate scientist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research, explained. The study is the latest to focus on the impacts of climate change in the southeastern US, which has seen severe droughts and devastating storms. Environmentalists often point to sea-level rise in the region as the biggest threat. "The research examined sea-surface temperatures in the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean along the East Coast of the US and found that the southeast was warming the most of any region in the nation," Climate Central explained. "The results were published in the prestigious journal Nature Climate Change." "As the oceans warm, this increases the risk of rising sea levels," Hee said. The findings don't come as a surprise to many scientists. "Northeast and Southeast are the most affected areas," Tim Palmer, a climate researcher at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, told The Guardian last year. "The models show that over the next century, they're likely to get warmer and have higher sea level rises than much of

Vibhu Purusha Chakrathil Kannada Songs Hot Latest Kannada Songs Download Movie Songs About Movies Latest Archives Fandango Exclusive: The new Fox drama series Heat (premiering Friday, June 13th, 10 pm) is a multi-layered show that focuses not only on life and death in the New York legal system, but also embraces the humanity and the soul of the people. Hamptons: Summer is here—and so is a lot of drama. On Sunday night's season premiere of The Real Housewives of New York City (at 8 pm on Bravo), the ladies are coming together. New York City legal correspondent Renee Lockheart has the latest on the biggest legal battle to hit New York since the Lindbergh baby kidnapping. With crime and corruption soaring in the Big Apple, Renee navigates the daily life of a young New Yorker in the shadow of City Hall, the mayor's office, and—most of all—the real life and death battles of the Criminal Courts. So far this year, the city has seen two high profile trials resulting in murder charges against a cop. One went to conviction. And another went to a guilty verdict but the case has been appealed. Also, a trial over a police shooting took four days in a Brooklyn courtroom this past fall. And then, there's the infamous verdict of the Michael Brown shooting trial. And much more. While this fall's appeal plays out, Lockheart investigates the case of a single mother and her daughter who allege they were targeted by corrupt cops. This situation has blown up not only in the legal system—but has also captured the public's attention. Meanwhile, we're talking about the wealth of the rich and famous. Events and ceremonies, big and small, that make New York City the official world capital of high society. Like catwalk fashion, the rich and famous go to some of the most exclusive, high-end locations in the world. The location scouting and shooting of the pilot episode of the new Fox show Heat took place over five days in the Hamptons and New York City. The small screen crew found the time to film in exclusive homes, glamorous venues, and exclusive hotels. As the story goes, Larry (Jimmy O. Yang) and Leonard (Rodney H.***) are not just f988f36e3a
