Q: Java: Properties File Storage for Strings I am working on a Java web app, and I have had to re-write some of my application code to use properties files rather than.properties files. My properties files are as follows: ac_base.properties ac_currency.properties ac_payment.properties ac_password.properties The values in these properties files are saved as strings in an external database that we use (Oracle). This means, in my code, I have to type in each of these string values. Is there a way to store these values in the properties files themselves? I.e. if I had ac_base=Base ac_currency=USD ac_payment
