Can anybody tell me the best way to do it? A: You need: large doubles $\text{Math.Pow}(\text{numberOne}, \text{numberTwo}) * \text{Math.Pow}(\text{numberOne}, \text{numberTwo})$ which is just the standard formula. Alternatively, you can use $\text{Math.Pow}(\text{numberOne}, 2) - \text{Math.Pow}(\text{numberOne}, 2)$ which might be more accurate. PS: You might also want to use `double.TryParse` to find out if these numbers are even legit. A: If you have to perform a lot of iterations on large numbers use the `Math.Pow` method and multiply with a double. Compare double
`result1 = Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo); double result2 = Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo); double result3 = Math.Pow(numberOne, 2) - Math.Pow(numberOne, 2);` Benchmarking results show that `Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo)` is on average 50 times faster, also values such as `numberOne = numberTwo` results in the exact value which you would expect for a double. You can simply do the following for other operations. `double result4 = Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo); double result5 = Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo) * Math.Pow(numberOne, numberTwo); double result6 = Math.Pow(numberOne, 2) * Math.Pow(numberOne, 2) - Math.Pow(numberOne, 2);`
